There are many different colors to choose from in lenses when you buy Calvin Klein sunglasses. You also have an option of having polarized lenses in certain designs of these designer sunglasses if you want to wear them as boating sunglasses. The polarized feature of designer sunglasses helps to cut down on the glare of the sun off the water and is less harmful to your eyes. However, the regular description does not tell whether the sunglasses are polarized or not.

The frame of Calvin Klein sunglasses is lightweight and made of wire. You won't find that the sun glasses feel heavy when you need them to see where your lure is in the water. When you wear special boating sunglasses, you won't have to squint to get rid of the reflection off the water because the specialized lenses in the Calvin Klein sun glasses cuts down on the glare. However, not all the sunglasses in the Calvin Klein line have this technology so you do have to really look for the sun glasses you need for boating and fishing.

In boating sunglasses, most of the designs from Calvin Klein are unisex and do not differentiate between men's and women's designs. If you really want boating sun glasses suited for you, you should probably choose the designer sun glasses made just for the outdoors with Oakley, rather than Calvin Klein sunglasses.

The sunglasses you need for boating should have polarized lenses, not just to cut down on the glare, but to give you clearer vision. Although Calvin Klein does have polarized sunglasses, you have to check out each pair individually and read the description to find the designs that feature this technology. This is rather time consuming and unless you really, really want a pair of Calvin Kleins, chances are you will choose some other designer for your boating sun glasses. It is easy to shop for Calvin Klein sunglasses online, but it is not easy finding boating sun glasses in that mix.
