Snake skins and crocodile skins are most commonly used in creating these designer pieces. Even though leather and leather related products are a bit expensive, they are worth it because of their long lasting quality. The one thing people need to be careful about while shopping for leather is to tell the difference between genuine and fake leather. For those who can't afford high price for hand bags and wallets, these fake leather accessories are an easy option but these are of an inferior quality and don't last half as long as the genuine ones. The shine and clasps used are also prone to rusting and breakage with use.

Today, when men and women are working and riding high on the business wave, the need to look good, investing in a good wallet or a bag becomes essential.
