If you play a lot of golf, then you know the challenges of finding the right kind of sunglasses to let you see the greens and the ball in all kinds of lighting conditions. Avid golfers recognize the need for wearing golf sunglasses that address your needs when playing golf in all kinds of weather. Since you cannot change the direction of the sun when you tee off, you need special golf sunglasses to help you play the best game.

There are several designers that make sunglasses for golf. One of these is NYX and this company has developed a full line of golf sunglasses because they know that regular sun glasses are not enough. There are three different lens styles in these sunglasses made just for golf. The amber lens series of these best sport sunglasses are great for all kinds of contrasting conditions on the golf course. They filter blue light to enhance the color of the greens.

If you want the colors to remain true, then the best sport sunglasses to choose are the NYX golf sunglasses in the traditional line. In this line of sun glasses for golf, you can choose either gray or yellow lenses. The gray lenses in the sun glasses helps to minimize the color shift and the yellow lenses help to increase the flow when the light is low or flat.

Of all the golf sunglasses, the ones that combine the features of the amber and traditional lenses are really the best sport sun glasses for golf. These sunglasses for golf contain a darker lens to reduce the glare and they help improve the visual acuity you need when playing golf.

Golf sunglasses need to be lightweight because of the length of time you are outdoors. They also need to have 100% UV protection in a wraparound design. This feature in sunglasses for golf gives you the ultimate protection and at the same time provides you with unobstructed vision. It's no good to be able to hit the golf ball really well and make a hole in one if you can't see the ball.
